PREFACE.

The work of collecting material for this pamphlet commenced several years ago, and has required hundreds of letters and circulars, which were sent to everybody I could learn of who could probably give any desired information.

As early as 1906 the work had progressed so far that the following circular was sent out:

CALDWELL. COLDWELL. COLWELL.

October 30, 1906.

Dear Sir:

William Coldwell, born 1695 in England, was kidnapped and impressed into the British navy when only sixteen years old. He deserted at Boston in 1712. Married Jane Jordan at Stoughton, Mass. Had a large family of children. Lived in Connecticut. Moved to Nova Scotia, where he died in 1802, aged 107 years. His history is full of interest, and for a long period I have been collecting material for a genealogy of his family, with a view to its publication when conditions shall warrant it.

I wish to obtain the full name and a brief history of each member of the family, including date and place of each birth, marriage, and death; to whom married, with names of parents of wife or husband (including the mother's maiden name); children; all places of residence; occupation, or profession; when and where graduated; what he or she has accomplished of note; the names of all who were in the army or navy, with particulars in connection therewith; offices or positions of trust held; and everything—religious, political, and otherwise—that it may be interesting for those who come after us to know.

Will you kindly assist in this undertaking by filling out the accompanying blanks, adding any information not embraced in the answers to the printed questions thereon, on the other side of the sheets, or on other sheets, and return the same promptly to me?

Please give the names of your ancestors, in this line, as far back as possible, with whatever of the foregoing desired information in regard to them you can furnish. If more blanks are wanted, notify me and they will be sent.

I would also like names and addresses of other members of the family who can give information, and any other facts or suggestions that will forward this work and help to make it useful and reliable.

☞Please be very careful in copying records.

CHAS. T. CALDWELL, M. D.,
"The Olympia," Washington, D. C.

I have met with cold indifference from some, but hearty and cordial assistance and coöperation from others.

In the summer of 1908 I made it my pleasure to visit Nova Scotia in quest of facts and to become acquainted with my remote kinsfolk in that locality, in whom I had become interested, and enjoyed a most delightful and productive visit to this beautiful and interesting region.

In order to erect a suitable monument to our first Caldwell ancestor in America, the following was issued in November, 1908:

WILLIAM COLDWELL.

(Caldwell, Coaldwell, or Colwell, as variously spelled.)

NOVEMBER, 1908.

A history of the life of our above-named ancestor, with a record of over 150 families and 700 descendants of the family name, has been compiled for gratuitous distribution. A plain but substantial monument is to be erected to his memory at Wolfville, Nova Scotia, to be unveiled with appropriate ceremonies, including an address on the Coldwell family in general and this branch in particular, in July, 1909. A committee has been selected to carry out this plan and to secure contributions from "descendants" in sums of $1 to $10, as individuals may be able or disposed to give. Such contributions or pledges should be mailed to the Treasurer, and should be made now, so that the committee may know how much will be available for the purpose. It is hoped that every one will feel it a privilege as well as a duty to give something.

It is proposed to make the unveiling an occasion for a general convention of the descendants of "Father William;" a home-coming for the many who were born in Nova Scotia, but have drifted away from old Gaspereau, and a delightful visit to the Land of Evangeline, and a getting acquainted with their kinsfolk, for others of the Coldwell clan.

Funds were collected, the monument procured, and the rest of the story is told in the following pages.

The Acadian, Wolfville, Nova Scotia, July 9, 1909.

THE COLDWELL CELEBRATION.

One of the pioneer settlers of Horton township was William Coldwell, who was born in England in 1695, came to Massachusetts in 1712, married Jane Jordan there, and removed with his family to Nova Scotia in 1758, leaving in Bridgewater, Mass., one son, Ebenezer, whose descendants are found there and in other parts of the United States.

One of these, Dr. Charles T. Caldwell, of Washington, D. C., has for years been tracing the progeny of "Father William," and has now a record of over 150 families and 700 descendants. Dr. Caldwell was in Wolfville last summer for the first time, and is here again now to take part in the family gathering. Through his suggestion a monument has been erected to this pioneer ancestor, and on July 1st it was dedicated in the presence of nearly 150 descendants of these early settlers. The stone is of granite with a double base, and bears the inscription:

"William Coldwell, born in England, 1695. Died Oct. 28, 1802, at Gaspereau, N. S.; also his wife, Jane Jordan, born at Stoughton, Mass., June 1, 1707. Erected by their descendants, 1909."

At the dedication service Rev. J. D. Spidell offered the invocation, after which Mr. A. E. Coldwell read the following dedication:

"My dear friends, descendants of a common ancestor, whose name we revere, whose memory we cherish, we meet here today to do fealty to a worthy and sturdy pioneer, the brave, the honored Father William, to whose memory we dedicate this stone.

"A century and a half ago he came to this country and settled in this beautiful valley, not then as now smiling with the full fruitage of modern agriculture, for where now orchards bloom and tilled fields yield their wealth to the skilled husbandman was then forest or thicket. He was one of the pioneers who broke up the virgin soil and produced the conditions which make it possible for us, his descendants, to surround ourselves with the comforts and blessings which we now enjoy. 'He labored and we have entered into his labors.' His children's children unto the third and fourth generations now inherit this fertile valley of the Gaspereau and these pleasant hillsides, and are found in the neighboring republic from Massachusetts to California, some of whom we are very glad to welcome here today. In consideration, therefore, of our indebtedness to this common ancestor, how appropriate it is that we should set up this monument to perpetuate his memory and to be a continued reminder to our descendants of one who encountered hard and discouraging surroundings and manfully won his way through. We ought all to rejoice that in this year of grace 1909 we have been moved to commemorate the lengthy, self-denying life of our sturdy ancestor and to set up this monument as a perpetual reminder of his sterling worth. May our children and our children's children in the countless generations to come ever hold in grateful remembrance the life of him to whom we dedicate this monument."

The assemblage then adjourned to the grove in front of the hall at Gaspereau, where tables were erected and an elaborate repast provided, to which full justice was done. It was a most enjoyable social event, a pleasant family reunion, and everything contributed to the success of the occasion. After the banquet Dr. C. T. Caldwell gave an historical address, which was listened to with great interest. He traced the ancestry from France to Scotland, where three brothers settled north of the Solway near a cold well, from which they derived their surname, spelled and pronounced Cald north of the Solway and Cold in England, so that the two names have the same origin. Oliver Cromwell was descended from the family, and they figured prominently in English and Scottish events during the Stuarts and house of Hanover.

THE CALDWELL NAME AND FAMILY.

ADDRESS BY C. T. CALDWELL, M. D.

In Scotland the Caldwells of Caldwell, in Ayrshire, had become prominent as early as 1349, when they furnished William Caldwell, a prebendary of Glasgow, for Lord Chancellor of Scotland.

Caldwell, in East Gascote Hundred, was by King Richard I given to the Knights Templars, and, after their suppression, it was given to the Knights Hospitallers of Jerusalem.

Armorial bearings of the name are wells, fountains, ships, waves, fish, water fowls, and the hazel branch or divining-rod, all suggestive of water.

In the Domesday Book, that first great record of English surnames, compiled in the reign of William the Conqueror (1080 to 1085), we find the name recorded as Caldwell, Coaldwell, Cauldwell, Caldewelle, and Colwell—the same name spelled in different ways.

In those days the use of surnames in England was just becoming common, having been introduced only a few years earlier, with the coming of the victorious Normans, who had but recently adopted the custom.

Surnames originated in various ways. Sometimes an individual adopted the name of his trade or profession (Carpenter, Smith, Tailor), or that of a color (White, Gray, Black), or an animal (Wolf, Lyon, Martin), or, in fact, anything that suited his fancy. Often surnames were applied to persons or families indicating their position in life or the locality in which they lived.

The Patronymica Britannica gives Caldwell and Coldwell as synonymous.

In attempting to trace the name to its origin and ascertain its meaning, we find two distinct versions, applying to different groups not related to each other by ties of blood, one of Scotch the other of Italian-French extraction, showing the origin of the name in two ways.

The earlier Scotch families of the name are said to have derived their surname from the fact that they, or certain individuals among them, were reputed to possess the power of locating subterranean springs or streams of cold water by means of the divining-rod or witch-hazel branch. They were often called upon to select the best spot for digging a well, and so became known as the cald-well people by their Scotch neighbors.

The hazel branch, which is a symbol of wisdom, appears on their coat of arms. Their motto was "Dare to be wise."

The Solway Branch.

The origin of the name as applied to our own ancestors appears from tradition and accounts from various sources to be as follows:

In the latter part of the fifteenth century there lived two notorious seafaring brothers by the name of Barbarossa who maintained a large and powerful fleet by which they held complete mastery of the Mediterranean. All nations of that sea paid tribute to them and at the same time courted their friendship. Petty rulers dreaded their power and influence, for they were in alliance with some of the most daring spirits of Spain, France, and Scotland. Of course they were regarded by their friends as protectors, while by those who happened, for the time, to be their enemies they were denounced as pirates and freebooters.

This company and their business flourished for about twenty years, when they were surprised and defeated by the Galma of Hian, a captain of a nation in Africa.

After this defeat those who escaped dispersed and settled in various parts of the world.

Three brothers, John, Alexander, and Oliver, whose ancestors fled from the Piedmont valleys, in northwestern Italy, during the persecution of the Waldenses, commanded vessels under the Barbarossas. They now settled at Mt. Arid, near Toulon, in France (their native city), and established there a similar naval force, much feared by their enemies as a powerful and fearless band of adventurers.

They were employed by the merchants of Lisbon, Spain, to capture or destroy the pirates who infested the Mediterranean and crippled their commerce by preying upon their ships. For this service, which was a benefit to France also, they each received $20,000 from King Francis I of that country.

In the numerous minor wars of that time they were employed by the contestants, sometimes on one side and sometimes on the other, to wage war against and plunder the enemy, whomsoever he might chance to be.

It so happened, in 1525, during the war between Emperor Charles V of Germany, who was also King of Spain, and Francis I of France, their former patron, they espoused the cause of the former, who was finally victorious, and it is stated that by their activity and successful exploits they so aroused the relentless enmity of the French king that, following his release after a year of captivity, he turned his attention to these so-called "Protestants and robbers of Arid" and so persistently pursued them that they concluded to leave the country. The unpleasant relations existing at this period between the King of France, who persecuted Protestants, and James V of Scotland, who favored them, made them welcome to the Scottish realm. Consequently an agreement was entered into with this monarch, about 1530, whereby each of these brothers—John, Alexander, and Oliver—should, whenever requested, furnish "a son with a troop of twenty horsemen of sound limb and fully armed, to aid in the wars of the king."

They were allotted a tract of land near Solway Firth, in the south of Scotland, which, by special permission of the King, they purchased from a bishop named Douglas. This locality was noted for an excellent spring or well of pure and very cold water, and was known as the region of the "cold well." Hence these new settlers became known as the people of the cold-well region—as Alexander of Cold-well, or Cold-well Alexander, and finally Alexander Coldwell. Their neighbors being Scotch, the name was spelled Cald-well or Cauldwell, just as a Scotchman would naturally pronounce it.

Here they lived, accumulated property, and acquired influence. They intermarried with the most powerful families of the land, and became connected with the royal family. Queen Elizabeth was a descendant of the Caldwells and their staunch friend. Joseph, John, Andrew, and David were among the Caldwells who, in 1649, went with their kinsman, Oliver Cromwell (whose grandmother was Anne Caldwell, of Solway Firth), to Ireland, of which he had been made lord or governor. Upon his promotion to the Protectorship of England, in 1653, some of these Caldwells remained in Ireland, some returned to England, while others crossed the Atlantic and settled in the colonies. Many of them came to America after the restoration of Charles II, as, for obvious reasons, they were no longer in favor at home.

It may be noted here that many of the Caldwell settlers in Ireland adopted the Colwell manner of spelling the name, and we have a record among the early Scotch planters of Alexander and Andrew Colwell as lessors of the barony of Raphoe, County Donegal, in the north of Ireland.

It is said, with some facts to support the claim, that the Coldwell way of spelling the name originated at Ely, and that no record of the name can be found prior to 1636, at which time Oliver Cromwell inherited an estate there. In 1643 he was made lieutenant governor of the Isle of Ely. Here one or more of his Caldwell cousins located with him, and incidentally changed the spelling of the name to Coldwell to conform to the English manner of pronouncing it. I am told that from that time to the present the church records show births, marriages, and deaths of many members of this Coldwell branch. They were Cromwell's kinsmen in Scotland and they came with Cromwell to England. They were Caldwells in Solway and were Coldwells in Ely, and that is all the difference there is between these names. In our own particular line the manner of spelling varies with the whim or fancy of the individual, or did so up to a very recent time.

Of these Coldwells of Ely, one William Coldwell, born about the time of their arrival, became the vicar of Wisbeach and one of the prebendaries of the Cathedral Church at Ely, fellow of Queen's College of Cambridge, etc., whose daughter Prudence married William Fienes, second son of Lord Say and Sele, K. C. (Collin's Peerage, Vol. VII, p. 25), and whose only son, William Coldwell, Jr., born July 20, 1673, married Mary, daughter of Thomas Edwards, of Wisbeach, died February 11, 1706, and was buried at St. Albans, in Hertfordshire, at Welwyn Church, where a costly monument, beautifully sculptured with coat of arms, scroll-work of flowers, and an elaborate inscription, was erected by the widow to his memory.

According to one tradition he was the father of our own "Father William," who was born 1695, and would thus have been eleven years of age at the time of his father's death, a point that fits remarkably well with the facts as we know them.

We now come to where we have more definite information concerning Father William himself—this man who lived in three centuries, who died here 107 years ago, and who was born just 107 years earlier. We learn from several accounts that he was born in England in 1695; that his father died when William was a mere child, and that, when at the age of sixteen he was visiting the seashore and amusing himself by gathering shells on the beach, he was "set upon by rough men," seized, carried away, and impressed into the British Navy. Such an act was not uncommon in those days.

It is claimed by those holding the belief that he was the son of William Coldwell, of Hertfordshire, referred to, that his mother, who was yet young and possessed of considerable wealth, was contemplating remarriage, to which plan the boy offered strenuous opposition. Consequently it is believed the kidnapping was connived at by persons interested in his mother's wealth.

Be that as it may, we have from numerous sources the fact that when about sixteen years of age he was kidnapped and impressed into the royal navy.

Just how long he remained in the navy we do not know, but one record locates him at Boston, Mass., in 1712. Becoming dissatisfied with his position and its hardships, so cruelly thrust upon him, he felt that under the circumstances desertion was no disgrace. Alone in the world, with no home ties to lure him back to England, even if he dared to go there, he resolved on an attempt to regain his liberty and make for himself a home somewhere in the colony. So one chilly day in autumn "he left the ship" without leave, and, turning his back upon the royal navy and the city of Boston, struck out for the "blue hills" of Massachusetts and for freedom—a homeless, friendless boy, a fugitive, a deserter—to find himself at the damp and gloomy nightfall, footsore and hungry, seeking food and shelter at the home of a kind-hearted farmer near Stoughton. The farmer and his wife befriended him, and with them he lived for several years.

Here among the granite hills of New England he grew to manhood. Here he formed the attachment for the one who afterward became his wife and the great-great-great-grandmother of every one of us in this numerous Caldwell clan. Here he established his home and here several of his children were born. For several years we have no definite information concerning him, but "he was one of the first adventurers on the Isle of Sable for the relief of the distressed castaway there."

THE ISLE OF SABLE.

Dark Isle of Mourning: aptly thou art named,
For thou hast been the cause of many a tear.
For deeds of treacherous strife too justly famed,
The Atlantic's charnel—desolate and drear.

The work of relief for shipwrecked mariners on that bleak and dangerous island required manhood, self-denial, and courage, as does the duty of those in the life-saving service of today. The hardships were probably greater then than now.

For many years prior to 1719 nothing of importance had been undertaken in this line, but at that time, under the leadership of a French Protestant minister, the Rev. Andrew Le Mercier, of Boston, an effort was made to establish a permanent relief station on the island, which was continued for more than twenty years. Just when William Coldwell joined this colony, or how long he remained, does not appear. It is stated that he lived for some time in Nova Scotia prior to 1733. It was probably then that he gained his knowledge of that country that induced him to migrate thither after the expulsion of the Acadians.

Perhaps it was his love for a New England maiden that lured him back to Massachusetts. At any rate, we find him back in Stoughton in 1733, where he married Jane, daughter of Jonathan and Jane Jordan, of that place. As the name of Jane Jordan deserves more than mere mention, I will give the names of members of her family as shown by Stoughton records.

Children of Jonathan and Jane Jordan.

1. John, born September 19, 1711. Died in infancy.
2. Jonathan, born December 27, 1713.
3. John (No. 2), born August 2, 1715.
4. Jane, born June 1, 1717.
5. Jeddediah, born September 6, 1719.
6. Jemima, born February 14, 1724.

It is quite probable that this family, or part of it, removed to Connecticut with William Coldwell in 1742, as the name ceases to be mentioned by the town records about that time, and we know by the records of Wolfville, Nova Scotia, that Jeddediah Jordan was there with his sister Jane and brother-in-law, William Coldwell, and, like them, was among the first settlers of that town, about 1760.

In Jane Jordan, his wife for over sixty years, he found a devoted and constant helpmeet. She was with him until her death, May 15, 1796. She was with him throughout his sojourn in Connecticut, and with him she endured the hardships and trials of that long journey to Nova Scotia, ever helpful, ever faithful, and a monument to his memory would be incomplete without the mention of her name.

Their children, born at remarkably regular intervals, were—

1. William, Jr., born November 20, 1734. Married Naomi Noyce, in 1755, and died 1756.
2. John, born 1736. Married Eleanor Hackett.
3. Jeddediah, born September 13, 1738. Probably died in Connecticut.
4. Jemima, born June 27, 1740. Probably died in Connecticut.
5. Jane, born July 5, 1742. Married Nicholas Fielding.
6. Ebenezer, born 1744. Married Sarah Price. Died in 1827.
7. Jonathan, born 1746. Married, first, Catharine Newcomb; second, Susanna Pyke.
8. Jacob, born 1748. Married Margaret Chapman.
9. Mary, born 1750. Married Gilbert Forsythe.
10. Eliphalet, born 1752. Married, first, Abagail Sutherland; second, Mary Pyke (?).

The exact dates of birth of some of the children are unknown, as the public records of Fairfield, Conn., were burned by the British troops in the Revolution.

It is interesting to note how the names of the Jordan children were all reproduced in the William Coldwell family—a fact which shows that "Mother Jane" had some influence in her own family. John was the only son among those who went with the father to Nova Scotia who was old enough in 1760 to have land allotted to him in his own right; so that, although we have not found the exact date of his birth, the year 1736 is probably correct, as stated in the list.

Some time between 1742 and 1744 the family removed to Bridgeport, Conn., and lived in that neighborhood until about 1757 or 1758.

The church record shows his pew-holding, and refers to him as "Capt." Coldwell, but I have no knowledge of how he acquired that title. Very little is known about him during the twelve or fourteen years he lived in Connecticut. After the expulsion of the Acadians, in 1755, the British government offered land in Nova Scotia to loyal citizens who would go there with their families and establish their homes. This was not the exodus of the "Tories" or "Loyalists" from the States, as some have stated to me. It was nearly twenty years before the American Revolution and long before the causes of that war had become acute.

As heretofore stated, his knowledge of that country induced our hardy ancestor to make the move. Here we have an example of what was evidently one of the dominant traits of his character. With him determination was strong; there was no compromise, as we know from other incidents in his career. Once resolved on making the journey, there was no turning back, although he knew what this migration meant for him and his family. The long, tortuous journey by land, to be made with household goods packed upon wagons, made it an undertaking to cause the youthful and strong to hesitate. Although then past his "three score years," when most men are thinking of retirement and the comforts of home for their old age, he had yet more than forty years of health in store for him. We of today, who make this journey by Pullman car and palatial steamboat in less than twenty-four hours, have no conception of the hardships incident to that journey of a thousand miles in the middle of the eighteenth century (150 years ago).

In imagination we can see them wending their way along the dusty highways, over the hills, through the meadows, crossing the streams and rivers by ford or ferry, passing towns and toiling through the wilderness, pausing betimes to rest and refresh themselves and their animals, camping at night and over Sabbath by some wayside spring or sheltering grove, through sunshine and storm, often weary and worn, but never despondent. Many and severe were the hardships and trials they endured on that memorable journey that made the majority of you here assembled natives of Nova Scotia. No wonder that they so impressed the mind of the eleven-year-old Jonathan that they became the burden of his thought and conversation in the last years of his long life, eighty years later. The goal they sought was the fair Acadia, the home and birthplace of hundreds of their descendants.

The plans for the journey were laid in Connecticut. Several families of the neighborhood were of this wagon-train of emigrants, which was joined by others along the way. The route from Connecticut was via Stoughton, Mass., where a halt was made for needed rest and a visit with their old friends and relatives. The stay was for only a few days, and then the company was ready to resume its journey, when an incident occurred that shaped the destinies of the son Ebenezer and his descendants. He was at that time about thirteen years of age, and from the first had been very much averse to the proposed emigration, strenuously but unsuccessfully opposing it in every possible way. Whether he was encouraged by his relatives at Stoughton to take the step we do not know, but we do know that when the hour to move on arrived, this boy was missing. Two days of delay were spent in fruitless search. Then the party was obliged to proceed without him, the neighbors promising to care for him when found, and, if possible, to induce him to follow and rejoin his father and family.

Several days passed before he was discovered in the family of John Brett, of Bridgewater, ten miles from Stoughton. He persistently refused to follow the family, and became a "deserter," as his father had been at about the same age and in that same locality over forty years earlier. His "runaway" trip began at Stoughton, where his father's ended. He remained in Bridgewater and became a much-respected citizen and official of the town, where he died in 1827.

It was fortunate that these two "runaway boys" fell into good surroundings and proper influences. Each remained in the family of his benefactor for several years. Ebenezer showed his gratitude by purchasing the old Brett homestead, when it was about to pass out of the family's possession, and made it his home. He named his first son Brett and his last one John, in honor of John Brett, who had been his "friend in need."

There was never a reconciliation between this truant son and his father. With Ebenezer, as with his father, there was no compromise. That this wayward one was not forgotten, but was held in affectionate remembrance by the family, is shown by the fact that his youngest brother, Eliphalet, named one of his sons Ebenezer, and the name became as common in that branch of the family as among the descendants of Ebenezer himself.

Being thrown together with members of the Providence branch of the family, he adopted their manner of spelling the name, and, dropping the "d," spelled it Colwell. There was little or no communication between him and other members of the family, and he "became as one dead" to them. They were staunch Royalists, while he became a soldier of the Revolution. They knew of his military service in defense of the new government, and believed a report that while "he was with Montgomery in his expedition against Canada he died at Lake George." The Adjutant General's reports show that he served later with the "Minutemen" of Massachusetts.

While some of his relatives believed him dead, there were evidently some who knew of his whereabouts, for when his father died, in 1802, he was promptly informed by the following published notice:

"Horton, Nova Scotia, Nov. 2, 1802.

"William Coldwell died at this place October 28, 1802, in the 108th year of his age. He was a native of England, and remembered the coronation of Queen Anne. He served in the British Navy upward of ninety years ago; afterwards he became a settler in New England, and was one of the first adventurers on the Isle of Sable for the relief of the distressed castaway there. He was one of the first settlers here in 1760. He left behind him a numerous progeny, upward of one hundred of which, to the degree of great-grandchildren, reside in this place. He generally retained his health and bodily strength to that degree that he could cut wood and walk to his neighbors without a staff till last year, and till his death retained all his mental faculties to a surprising degree, and, as he lived the life of a Christian, so at death he testified his confidence in a blissful immortality."

That, after all, Ebenezer cherished a love for his father is shown by the fact that this notice was treasured and preserved among his most valuable papers, where it was found after his death, twenty-five years afterward. It comes to us now with much information of Father William that would otherwise have been forever lost.

One account of Father William (American Ancestry, Vol. V, p. 187) states that he "mowed hay on his 100th birthday and signed his name on his 102d birthday," etc. This article gives his age as 106 at the time of his death, which is stated as 1801. As we have the exact date of that event in 1802, his age at death was 107. Another error is the statement that he married Abagail Sutherland.

and gives the time as "about 1795," which is evidently a mistake, as then she was dead and he was 100 years old. See page 19.

The Sutherlands.—Thomas and Peleg were sons of Joseph Sutherland, who came from Scotland to Horseneck, Conn., and were neighbors of the Coldwell family in that State. Thomas, whose wife was Barsheba Palmer, came with the emigrants to Nova Scotia, and was one of the first settlers of Wolfville. Abagail, his daughter, born 1755, married Eliphalet Coldwell in 1774, died 1790, and was buried in the cemetery at Wolfville, where her name appears on a well-preserved gravestone inscribed "Abagail, wife to Eliphalet Coaldwell." Thomas returned to the States and died there in 1807. Peleg Sutherland did not migrate to Nova Scotia. "He lost his life at that memorable event when Tryon with a band of British and Tories burnt the town of Fairfield" (Orcutt's Bridgeport, Conn., p. 1107).

After the arrival of the emigrants in Nova Scotia they settled on the Gaspereau River, William Coldwell drawing land on both sides of the stream and on the marsh. He was allotted ground in the townsite of Wolfville.

After a residence of three years in the locality, as required, we find the following record entries:

May 27, 1761. William Coldwell (and others), 100,000 acres at Horton. Record Book 3, page 31.

October 15, 1765. William Coldwell (and others), 100,000 acres near Liverpool. Record Book 6, page 402.

October 15, 1765. William Coldwell (and others), 100,000 acres at Pictou. Record Book 6, page 405.

October 15, 1765. William Coldwell (and others), 200,000 acres at Liverpool. Record Book 6, page 411.

October 31, 1765. William Coldwell (and others), 100,000 acres at Shedudabock. Record Book 6, page 488.

November 21, 1766. William Coldwell, license to alienate 450 acres. Record Book 6, page 616.

November 21, 1766. John Coldwell, license to alienate 225 acres. Record Book 6, page 616.

The purpose of these extensive grants of land, that in most cases "reverted to the crown," is not known, but it is supposed that William Coldwell acted in some way as an agent for the settlement of these localities, and that he held the land in trust for disposal to other settlers.

The land that he held and lived upon is located in one of the most beautiful and picturesque valleys it has ever been my pleasure to behold.

I have been told that when the country began to fill up with new settlers, between 1760 and 1770, the inhabitants in the vicinity of Wolfville were of many religious denominations, but from necessity they formed one non-sectarian congregation and lived in harmony under this plan for several years. Then it was decided by a majority vote of the members to change it to a church of the Baptist denomination, in order to secure the services of a pastor who was very much desired and who happened to be of that faith. Consequently the Coldwells, who were before that time Episcopalians, became Baptists, and so we find them today in that neighborhood nearly all adherents to the Baptist faith.

I have made many efforts to ascertain how our respected ancestor spelled his name in affixing his signature, but the only example I have so far been able to find is the record of the deed by which he conveyed his holdings at Stoughton, Mass., wherein the name is spelled Coaldwell. In the record of his marriage, also, it appears as Coaldwell.

Some of his descendants omitted the "a," others dropped the "o," and at least one cut out both "a" and "d" as superfluous.

It is said that a short time before his death he walked unaided from his home to the house of his son Jonathan, more than a mile distant.

Facts concerning the experiences of these early settlers would be interesting, but the time is becoming so remote and records are so few and scant that it seems impossible to obtain more.

We dedicate today a monument to the memory of "Father William" and "Mother Jane." Our records when published will be another monument to their memory, that may go to the homes of their many descendants, now scattered from Nova Scotia to California, and from Porto Rico to Alaska.

PUBLISHED REFERENCES.

North Bridgewater, Mass., Gazette.—About 1830. Stoughton items. William Caldwell the 13th on the parish tax-list of 1745. He was taxed in the town tax-list of 1742. Not in tax-list of 1727 nor 1730. He came from Nova Scotia (see page 12), and there is a tradition in the family that he deserted from a British ship-of-war. His wife was a daughter of Jonathan Jordan, Sr., a resident of this parish, as seen by the tax-list.

William Caldwell had, so far as we know, one son only,* Ebenezer Colwell, who settled in West Bridgewater and married Sarah Price, daughter of Benjamin Price, Sr., of Bridgewater. He owned and dwelt upon the homestead estate of Elihu Brett, Esq., judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Plymouth County. The children of Ebenezer Colwell were Brett, 1771; Keziah, 1775; Ebenezer, 1799; Sally, 1781; Melvin, 1786, and John, 1791.

Caldwell Chronicle.—Supplement, October, 1899. Providence, R. I. Published by Rev. Augustine Caldwell. A list of early settlers in America by the name of Caldwell gives—

"William Caldwell, born 1694, in England. Boston, 1712. Wife, Jane Jordan, of Canton (or Stoughton). Lived in Connecticut. Settled in Nova Scotia."

Cleveland Genealogy, Vol. I, page 252 (from notes of Wm. Pitt Brechin, of Boston, Mass.):

"William Coldwell, born in south of England between 1690 and 1695. Was pressed into navy. Left ship in America. Settled in Connecticut. Came to Nova Scotia. Was an original grantee at Horton in 1760. Died 1801, aged 106. Married, about 1795, Abagail Sutherland."†

American Ancestry, Vol. V, page 187:

"William Coldwell, born in south of England in 1695. Died at Gaspereau, Nova Scotia, in 1801. Pressed into Royal Navy at age of 18. Deserted in America. Settled in Connecticut. After the expulsion of Acadians, came to Nova Scotia. Died at age of 106. Buried at Wolfville. Is said to have mown hay on his 100th birthday and signed his name on 102d. Married Abagail Sutherland."†

* Ebenezer was the only son who remained in that locality, and hence the only one known to the writer.

NOTE.

I have taken the most reliable information I could obtain for the lists I have prepared. There are some branches I have been unable to trace, about which I hope to learn more in the near future.

No attempt has been made to include descendants not bearing the family surname, as, owing to the difficulty of such a task, the record would necessarily be far from complete.

Where errors or omissions occur, I would appreciate a correction from any one who can furnish correct data or give additional information, in order that any later edition may be more accurate and comprehensive.

WILLIAM COALDWELL

AND

1. WILLIAM.

Born 1695, in England. Kidnapped, 1711. Impressed into British Navy. Deserted at Boston, Mass., 1712. Married Jane, daughter of Jonathan and Jane Jordan, at Stoughton, Mass. Removed to Connecticut about 1745, and from Bridgeport, Conn., to Horton, Nova Scotia, 1758. Died at Gaspereau, Nova Scotia, October 28, 1802, aged 107 years.
